

Where We Are, Where We're Going

A quick update on our PLT work — and what's ahead

A quick reset (we covered the full “why” at the start of the year): a PLC isn't a meeting or a binder — it's how we work together so every student learns. Teams have built their foundation — roles, norms, and accountability. Here's what's next.

Meetings 3 and 4: finishing the foundation

Meeting 3 — baseline how your team works together on the Collaborative Team Rubric: a mirror, not a grade; it stays with your team and isn't reported up. Name one thing to grow. Meeting 4 — a reset to finish anything from Meetings 1–4 that isn't done yet, and make sure the team is ready to move into the first big chunk of the content work: Clarifying Essential Learning.

Meeting 4 checklist — are we ready to move on?

Before the standards work begins, our team has:

- ☐ A shared understanding of why the PLC process matters — why we're doing this work (Meeting 1)
- ☐ Team roles assigned, with backups (Meetings 2 & 4)
- ☐ Specific, observable “We will...” norms (Meeting 2)
- ☐ An agreed way to hold each other accountable (Meetings 2 & 4)
- ☐ A Collaborative Team Rubric baseline and one growth focus (Meeting 3)

Where we're going → Clarifying Essential Learning (Meetings 5–8)

Critical Question 1 — what do we want students to learn? By Meeting 8, each team will have worked through:

Meeting	Focus
Meeting 5 · Oct 7	Identify the one essential standard to guarantee this cycle.
Meeting 6 · Oct 21	Deconstruct that standard into clear learning targets.
Meeting 7 · Nov 4	Define proficiency — what “learned it” actually looks like.
Meeting 8 · Nov 18	Buffer & calibration — finalize the targets and proficiency.