

Team Roles, Norms, and Accountability

One meeting, three short worksheets that lead into each other

Why this meeting matters

How a team works together shapes everything that follows. Before the content work begins, Meeting 2 builds the team's foundation — who does what, the specific behaviors you commit to, and how you'll hold each other to them — so that when the work gets vulnerable (looking at shared student evidence), the team is ready. Treat today as a strong first pass; you'll finalize at the Meeting 4 buffer.

Meeting 2 · Wednesday, August 26, 2026 · 45 minutes
Focus	How will we work together in a way that keeps student learning at the center?
Leave with	Assigned roles, specific and measurable norms, and an agreed way to hold each other accountable — finalized at Meeting 4.

Agenda — step by step

Time	What the team does
0–3 min	Frame the flow — name the three parts and revisit your Meeting 1 commitment.
3–13 min	Assign roles (Team Roles worksheet) — facilitator / team leader, recorder, and timekeeper, with backups. Small teams double up; larger teams add roles.
13–33 min	Write specific norms (Developing Specific Norms worksheet) — turn vague values into 4–6 observable “We will...” commitments. This is the big one; take the time. The Sample Team Norms and Developing Specific Actions sheets give models to borrow.
33–43 min	Set up accountability (Holding Each Other Accountable worksheet) — agree your protocol and practice one move. A first pass is fine.
43–45 min	Hand off — note what still needs finalizing at the Meeting 4 buffer.

The three worksheets are a set: Team Roles → Developing Specific Norms → Holding Each Other Accountable. Each ends with a handoff into the next.

Where we're going next → Meeting 3

Meeting 3 is Team Self-Assessment: your team baselines how it's functioning on the Collaborative Team Rubric — a mirror, not a grade — and names one area to grow this cycle.
