

What We Heard

Turning the interviews into a short list of needs — and a plan to respond.

After your interviews, group what you heard into a handful of need themes. Look for patterns that show up across teams, not one-off comments — then decide how each need gets met in the phase ahead. A few common themes are seeded below; cross out, rename, or add your own.

Need themes

| Need theme                   | What we heard (patterns, in their words) | How we'll respond in Meetings 5–8 |
|------------------------------|------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Time                         |                                          |                                   |
| Clarity on standards         |                                          |                                   |
| Examples & models            |                                          |                                   |
| Help using data              |                                          |                                   |
| Safety to say "I don't know" |                                          |                                   |
|                              |                                          |                                   |
|                              |                                          |                                   |

Name it back to teams: "Here's what you told us you need — and here's how we're building it into the next phase." That's what turns listening into trust.