

Team Self-Assessment

Naming current reality — and baselining the team

Why this meeting matters

Teams can't improve what they haven't named. Meeting 3 is an honest look in the mirror: the Collaborative Team Rubric turns the vague question “are we a good team?” into something specific and observable, and gives the team a baseline it will spend the year beating. It's a mirror, not a grade — it stays with the team and isn't reported up. Expect to be “emerging” in places; that's the whole point.

Meeting 3 · Wednesday, September 9, 2026 · 45 minutes
Focus	Where are we as a team right now?
Leave with	A Collaborative Team Rubric baseline and one named area of team focus for the cycle.

Agenda — step by step

Time	What the team does
0–5 min	Review norms and roles. Confirm who holds each role today and re-read your team norms together, then agree up front: this is honest reflection, not evaluation, and nobody is being graded.
5–20 min	Baseline your teamwork on the Collaborative Team Rubric. Everyone rates silently first, then compare where you differ — the gaps are the best conversation — and agree on a rating for each row.
20–35 min	Spot patterns. Look across your ratings: where is the team already strong? Where are you stuck? Name it without blame.
35–45 min	Pick one focus. Choose one rubric descriptor to move up a level by Meeting 12, and write it down — that's your team's growth goal for the cycle.

You'll re-score this rubric at Meeting 12 (mid-year) and Meeting 18 (final), and watch the team level up over the year.

Where we're going next → Meeting 4

Meeting 4 is the Reset & Readiness Check buffer: your team finalizes its roles and norms and runs the Four Critical Questions readiness check — getting ready before the standards work begins at Meeting 5.